

As Cheap As Skaggs'

Perhaps you have noticed that grocery advertisers claim that they "meet all advertised prices," etc. It appears that Skaggs' prices have become the criterion by which other dealers are governed. None hope or claim to undersell us, but are content when they can offer a few items at our prices and promise to sell everything as cheap.

Weber College Subscribes For Liberty Bonds

Weber college students and teachers came forth generously with subscriptions to the Liberty loan this morning, after a rousing meeting had been held with the Hon. Milton H. Welling and James Pingree as the principal speakers. Every student in the school pledged himself to give at least 50 cents toward a fund for the purchase of bonds for the school. In addition to this fund, many students signed up for individual subscriptions. Teachers also placed their names on the list, raising the total subscription to several hundred dollars.

Congressman Welling delivered a speech which reached the spirit of every person in the house and his appearance made a fitting feature for the observation of Liberty bond day. Describing the stupendous task America faces in winning German despotism and "kultur" off the earth, he made the audience realize, perhaps for the first time, the crying need for the support of every man and woman in the United States. Coming fresh from the seat of the United States government, where discussions of the war are held with all the knowledge and realization of its portent vividly in the minds of the country's leaders, Congressman Welling gave a message which struck home with tremendous effect.

Welling speaks.
"I have been wedded all my life," he said, "to the doctrine of the gospel of giving. I believe that if the people of America had given five billion dollars to the government for the prosecution of this war and the assistance of our allies, that if they had given that money without hope of return or profit on the gift, that they would feel they had done a better deed and would take more glory and honor for that deed."

"But the government is not asking anyone to give his money. The government is not even asking for the loan of the money without pay. The government will borrow your money, if you will lend it, and will pay you a good rate of interest for the use of the money."

"There is no greater evidence of the patriotism and love of America which we show than that of loaning our money for its need. The boys who go to the trenches to fight have given their all for this cause. We are only called on to loan our money. Now is the time for us to show that patriotism which we have been shouting; now is the time for us to stand back of our boasting with substantial aid. And we who are only called upon to lend our money have the far easier task than those who have given their very lives that they might stand between the nation and the enemy."

Investment in Liberty.
"This is an investment in human liberty. This is not a cold-blooded transaction of money for the interest which you will be paid. Every dollar you loan to the government for use in the prosecution of the war goes to aid some brave boy who has volunteered his life for this cause. Every dollar you loan to the government is a dollar in the bulwark of liberty, which is being raised to hold back the invasion of the hellish despot who has attempted to enslave the world to feed his lustful desires."

"We have been reared in these peaceful valleys of the mountains, where the air is sweet and liberty is broad and free. We have been surrounded with every luxury and everything that man may want. Now we have been called on to defend that liberty and these peaceful homes. Are we men enough to fight for our homes and our liberty, or shall we submit to inglorious subject? We are called upon to fight with our money, those of us who cannot go out to battle, and are we going to spare our precious dollars while the blood of the flower of our lands soaks the fields of Europe and while the scourge of all the world wages his war? Ours is the easy task."

The sacrifice of these young men, who go out to fight for our liberty is the supreme sacrifice. Are we men enough to sacrifice something, just a little convenience, a little luxury, a little ease, a few of our desires, to show these boys that their supreme gift is appreciated."

"We can't do a more splendid thing than to make our patriotism evident by loaning our money to the government for the use of our army and the armies of our allies. The time has come when we can do this and let us not be found wanting. Save a dollar or two a week, sacrifice a little, give up a few worthless pleasures, do anything, do anything you do your share toward helping in this great war, so that the boys who go out to stand between our homes and the perils of a foreign invasion, against the horrors of attacks by fanatical brutes whose every effort has been turned toward some master cruelty, that the acts of these boys may not go unappreciated."

President Wilkinson.
The meeting was conducted by Ernest Wilkinson, president of the Weber college student body. Mrs. Agnes Warner sang the opening solo. President Wilkinson followed this number with a spirited address on the meaning of Liberty day and the purpose of the meeting. He read the president's proclamation setting aside October 24 as a national holiday and called upon the school to pledge its support to the 35 former students of the institution and their comrades who have gone forth to protect the nation.

A quartette from the Weber college faculty composed of E. Earl Pardo, William McKay, Leroy Dixon and Mrs. Agnes Warner then sang "The Flag Without a Star," and the house broke forth with enthusiastic applause as the popular song was finished.
Chairman Pingree.
Chairman James Pingree of the northern district of Utah was introduced as the first speaker for the special observation of Liberty day. Mr. Pingree outlined briefly the causes of the war and brought vividly home to the minds of his hearers the part America has been called upon to do in the great struggle. The rank and file of American citizens he said, those who are not in the training camps and in the trenches, have been called upon to support the government with their money and have been asked to show their patriotism in this form.

War of Liberty.
"We are fighting a war of liberty," he said, "a war where the greatest principles of human life are concerned. It is not a money war as Germany has termed it. Americans are giving and must continue to give of their plenty. The world is in danger of being ruled by a despot, by a tyrant whose tyranny is greater and more horrible than that of the rulers of the ancient kingdoms. We have got to place our money against the usurpation of our country, against the aggression of this monster in human form, against the blotting out of our liberty and against our enslavement."

"Since our nation started when the Pilgrim fathers landed on the shores of America, we have been a nation with backbone, we have stood up for our rights and we have never been afraid to place our money, or our lives, in the balance against the aggression or the tyranny of a despot or against the power which insulted our honor."

Honor Sullied.
"We are fighting this war because Germany denied our right to sail the seas, denied our right to enjoy our God-given liberty, denied our right to conduct our business in peace and security, denied our right to rank with the nations of the earth. Could there be a more just cause or a greater reason?"

"Now we are called upon to give our money to back that struggle. It concerns every one of us and we cannot win unless every one of us lends his support. We shall be pleased to learn at the end of this great struggle that the world is still free, that liberty has been preserved to us and to our children. Think of the gratitude down through the generations that those succeeding us will have when they realize that we put forth our efforts to insure that freedom and liberty for them."

"We must supply our fighting forces with equipment and supplies in every department so that they may maintain their fighting strength at the front. We must never allow them to think we are not giving them our loyal support and in this case our actions will speak louder than our words. Loan your money to the government for this cause."

Mr. Pingree explained the various plans of buying liberty bonds and the systems of payment and discussed features of the loan, such as the tax-free provision, the maturity and interest connected with the bonds.

REFRIGERATOR CARS NEEDED BY UTAH FRUIT GROWERS

If there is one thing northern Utah apple raisers want more than anything else, it is a plentiful supply of refrigerator cars. Apples by the ton have been harvested and piled ready for shipment to market. They have been boxed and placed in baskets, every corner and sack and stored in every possible way, but no cars are sent to relieve the situation. W. A. Whitney, general manager of the Ogden, Logan & Idaho line, is in Denver at present trying to get a few cars promised from railroad officials in that city. The Denver & Rio Grande and other eastern roads entering Denver are being importuned to lend Utah a few cars, but thus far little satisfaction has been gained.

The car situation is most acute. There have been but two cars secured in days and there are apples enough to fill a train. These two cars were billed from Logan to Los Angeles. There is an embargo on box cars for use of apple shippers to eastern markets because of the possibility of a freeze which would destroy the shipment. Apples can be shipped to California over the San Pedro, however, in box cars, because the line is in warm territory and there is slight chance of a damaging frost.

WORLD'S MARKETS

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Trading at the opening of today's session on the stock exchange was much curtailed, presumably because of the general observance of Liberty day. Changes at the outset were of the same irregular character as those recently noted, shipments showing conspicuous strength while industrials were hesitant and rails increasingly heavy. Union Pacific broke 1 1/2 points, Reading 1 1/2, Great Northern a point and other active transportation shares yielded almost as much. Utilities were under renewed pressure particularly local traction. A block of $500,000 Liberty 3 1/2s sold at $9.78 with later sales at $9.80.

While the trading period limited to two hours in recognition of Liberty day, dealings on the stock exchange today were materially reduced. The trend was heavy, however, investment trials yielded 1 to 2 points, war issues also sagged and utilities indicated fresh liquidation. Shipments almost alone were exempt from pressure. Irregular allies extending to a point or more marked the final operations. The closing was heavy. Sales approximated 275,000 shares. Bonds were lower with further large transactions in the liberty issues at $9.70 to $9.82.

Chicago Quotations

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—Action by board of trade directors banning all new purchases of November and December deliveries of corn failed today at least temporarily to hold down prices. The announced purpose of the directors was to aid the government in preventing the existing scarcity of elevator stocks from hoisting valuations, but the most noticeable immediate effect of the measure taken was to increase the urgency of demand from shorts who desired to liquidate contracts. Forecast of unfavorable weather tended also to harden values. Opening quotations, which ranged from 1/2c off to a like advance, with December $1.14 1/2 to $1.15 1/2 and May $1.09 1/2 to $1.10 1/2, were followed by a sharp upturn all around.

One sympathized with the advance of corn. Besides, opinions were current that conditions were not auspicious for enlarged arrivals.

Provisions rose briskly in response to higher quotations on hogs and corn. Lard especially developed sudden strength.

Reports of corn husking delays due to labor scarcity counted somewhat as a bullish factor and so too did advices that indicated unusual slowness in the drying out of new corn. Prices closed nervous, 1 1/2c to 1 3/4c net higher with December $1.16 1/2 to $1.17 1/2 and May $1.12 1/2 to $1.13 1/2.
